Value Of SJC Education Shown At Liberal Arts Career Day

A myth exists about liberal arts degrees. Its basis is that the degree, not the person, secures the job. Reinforcers of this myth are ironclad statistics about employers' preferences, coupled with firsthand reports of personnel officers' freeze outs of liberal arts applicants.

Recently, 11 Saint Joseph's College alumni returned to the campus to refute this myth. Some were veterans of the job market; others had recently entered the arena. The big question posed to them by student observers centered on the worth of their liberal arts degrees.

All 11 noted the influence of their majors on their ability to communicate clearly -- on paper and in person. Analyzing information and situations, and making decisions based on these analyses, formed the basis of their promotions.

Eileen McGinnity, who will soon complete a move from editing to public relations, said that the person, not the degree, secures the job. One who has developed excellent learning skills has better advancement potential. Because she majored in a subject, English, which stressed a wide range of skills, including communications, she doesn't feel pigeonholed in any one job and can move freely within an organization and between organizations.

Tom DeMint, executive vice-president of J. Walter Thompson, Chicago, hires many college graduates. He searches for the person with imagination and creativity. He moved into advertising because of an interest in drawing, and from this medium, he worked into writing copy.

James Reichert is an example of a graduate with excellent learning potential. An English major, he found his first job in banking. Through this position, he learned computer operations and moved into medical research through computer work.

Edward Fischer, teacher at Notre Dame, writer of books and articles, and filmmaker, learned early to trust his intuition when making career changes in his life. He saw his varied occupations as representing the range of choices granted by a liberal arts education.

All these guests displayed self-confidence in discussing their past and future career options. They had learned from their experiences and had applied this new knowledge to future tasks. They agreed that while a college degree should allow for many variations in one career, circumstances and the person decide these variations.

Other participants in Liberal Arts Career Day were Susan Beecher (1977), social worker at New Castle Hospital, New Castle, Ind.; J. Michael Cleary (1976), senior lab technician at St. James Hospital, Chicago Heights, Ill.; Robert Lehmenkuler (1976), communications representative for Western Union, Indianapolis, Ind.; Raymond Leliaert (1968), business editor of the South Bend (Ind.) TRIBUNE; Ray McKenna (1971), assistant director of Public Library District, Zion, Ill.; William Moriarty (1961), partner in law firm of Dumas and Moriarty, Rensselaer, Ind.

Two Grants Received

Saint Joseph's College has received a grant for $2802 from the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) to upgrade the role of the fine arts in the school's Core curriculum of general education.

Dr. Quirarte Jacinto, Dean of the College of Fine and Applied Arts, University of Texas at San Antonio, has been assigned by the NEH to act as consultant to the Core faculty in enhancing the fine arts dimension of Core.

The grant also provides funds to Saint Joseph's faculty members for visiting other colleges and universities as well as museums to observe their fine arts programs.

"The Core faculty felt the need for this upgrading of the fine arts dimension of Core because thus far its contribution has been disjointed," explains Dr. John Nichols, coordinator of the Core curriculum. "We feel that a more integrated program is necessary for the betterment of the Core program in general."

Saint Joseph's College also has been awarded a grant of $15,900 by the National Science Foundation (NSF) for support of a project titled "Development of Computer-Aided Learning for Economics Courses."

Announcement of the grant was made to college president Father Charles Banet by George J. Lynch, grants officer for NSF. The grant is effective immediately and runs through Sept. 30, 1980.

College Gift Tax Credits Doubled

Tax credits have been doubled for contributions to Indiana institutions of higher education under provisions of a bill adopted by the recently-concluded General Assembly and signed into law by Gov. Otis R. Bowen.

The new legislation amends an 11-year-old law which was designed to stimulate more personal and corporate giving to the state's colleges and universities, both public and private.

The old law permitted taxpayers to receive as much as a 50 percent tax credit for contributions, to a maximum of $50 for individuals and $100 for a couple filing a joint return. In addition, corporations could receive 50 percent credit for gifts, not to exceed five percent of the company's adjusted gross income tax or $500, whichever was less.

The new changes raise the maximum credit to $100 for individuals, $200 for those filing jointly. Corporate credit limits are raised to 10 percent of the company's adjusted gross income tax or $1,000, whichever is less.

To qualify, gifts must be made to Indiana colleges and universities which are accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools, the Indiana Department of Public Instruction and the American Association of Theological Schools.

The legislation was signed to become effective, retroactively, on Jan. 1, 1978.

"We see this new law as vital to the future of our institutions," said Dr. Robert E. Martin, president of Independent Colleges and Universities of Indiana. "Our organization worked hard for this increase in the tax credit because of the financial pressures on all of our 31 members."

Dr. Martin said non-tax-supported institutions have a special need for increased personal and corporate philanthropy because their only source of revenue, student tuition and fees, has been pushed to the saturation point.

According to Dr. Martin, Hoosier taxpayers claimed a total of $2.6 million in tax credits in 1976 -- $1.6 million of it individual returns and $1 million in the corporate sector. "This means that the old law produced some $5.2 million in support of both public and private institutions."

Regrettably, he added, only 33,000 taxpayers—or two percent of the total—used credit. "This means we still have much educational work to do in persuading taxpayers to support the college of their choice through this legislation," Dr. Martin said.

Davis, Odorzynski Awarded Honors

Michael Davis, associate professor of geology, has been selected as this year's Wooden Cask recipient, based upon his participation in many aspects of student life, among these being faculty advisor to the Student Association this year.

Symbolizing the bringing of good spirits to the campus community, the Wooden Cask Award (a cask of liquor) is given by the Senate to a member of the SJC faculty, staff, or administration on the basis of: a) competence in his position as it benefits Saint Joe; b) non-academic rapport with students and student organizations, and a visible presence on campus; and c) promotion of the college beyond the campus, such as acting in town functions in the name of the college.

MIKE DAVIS

Dr. Sandra Odorzynski, assistant professor of economics, was named professor-of-the-year in student voting held in April. She and Davis were both nominated for their respective awards in the Student Senate.

Professor-of-the-year is primarily an academic award, and it emphasizes: a) participation in Core as a discussion leader, organizer, or lecturer; b) expertise and clarity as a professor in his given field; and c) availability to students for academic affairs (campus seminars, etc.).

Miller Top SJC Senior

David C. Miller, history major from Highspire, Pa., has been named senior-of-the-year for 1977-78 by the Saint Joseph's College Alumni Association.

In addition to Miller, four persons were nominated for the honor: Thomas P. Conde, business administration-computer science major from Merrillville, Ind.; Paul J. Dowling, Biology-chemistry major from Watertown, N.Y.; Mary C. Goszkowski, biology-chemistry major from Parlin, N.J., and Jay G. Hudleston, business administration major from Monon, Ind.

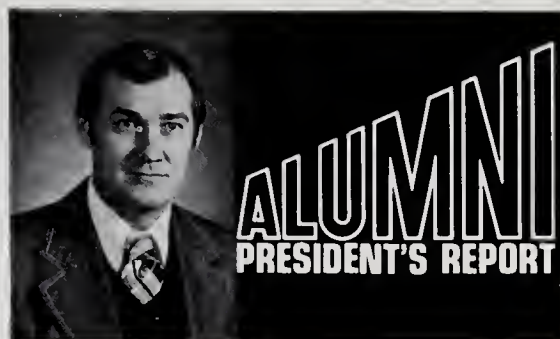

Miller, a consistent Dean's List student, has been engaged in many extracurricular activities ranging from student government to intramural athletics. He is president of the senior class this year, a member of the Student Senate and various government committees.

A member of the college Board of Appeals, he is a member of the Blue Key National Honor Fraternity and Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. He also has served on the Eli Lilly Endowment Committee, the Placement Office Senior Career Weeks Committee and the Senior Exit Interviews Committee.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Miller of 505 Second Street, Highspire, and a 1974 graduate of Steelton-Highspire High School.

MILLER

Dear Saint Joe Alumni and Alumnae,

I recently came upon an article dealing with the life and philosophy of Buckminster Fuller, the 82-year old world-famous inventor, mathematician, poet, and genuine "Renaissance man," whose awesome 100,000 geodesic domes throughout the world demonstrate overwhelmingly one man's ability to leave his "mark" in this life. This same man who was expelled twice from Harvard, only to later be appointed by that university to the same chair in poetry once held by T. S. Eliot and who holds over 800 patents in 55 countries, at age 32 stood some miles north of Saint Joe's campus, on the shore of Lake Michigan, contemplating suicide. An impoverished student, living with his wife in a Chicago slum, having just suffered the agony of the death of his first daughter and the humiliation of bankruptcy, Fuller found himself in a "jump or think" situation.

At that place, at that moment, Buckminster Fuller decided that his despair was not really the product of his own thinking, but instead the result of the values, concepts, and thinking of others who had shaped him into what he was. He decided, simply, to do his own thinking. He asked himself, "What can a little man effect . . . in the face of the formidable power of great corporations, great states, and all their know-how, guns, monies, armies, tools, and information?" The answer came: "The individual can take initiatives without anybody's permission. When you see a fresh stream of water working your way, if you scrape the earth a little, the water will run your preferred path."

It's been over 50 years now, since Buckminster Fuller made the discovery about his own potential, but obviously, the concept is both timely and timeless. When, more than now, has there been greater need for the individual to understand and exert his or her individual potential in this world?

So, what's your point, Fallat? The point is that Saint Joseph's College and Mr. Fuller share the same fundamental philosophy about the significance and the capacity of the individual. As alumni of Saint Joseph's, we therefore have two distinct responsibilities, or more appropriately, opportunities. To continue to express our full individual potentials throughout our lives and to support and encourage the continued efforts of Saint Joseph's College to instill in young people a sense of their uniqueness, worth, and unquestionable ability to affect the world.

Have a safe and enjoyable summer!

Sincerely,

Dale W. Fallat

Baseball Team Finishes 13-13-1

The 1978 Saint Joseph's College baseball team completed its season with a 13-13-1 record. The season was highlighted by a 5-4 Indiana Collegiate record and a tie for second place with Butler behind conference champion Indiana Central.

19-8 Pumas Reach NCAA Tourney

Saint Joseph's College dropped its first-round Division II basketball game to Eastern Illinois Mar. 5 by 100-93, and then rebounded by defeating Northern Kentucky 93-87 for a third-place consolation game vic-sorously missed our third senior, guard Gary Feagin, due to his knee injury.

"We got a lot of mileage out of a lot of people, and we did a lot of things out of sheer necessity," Waggoner notes. "It was a tory on Mar. 6. It marked Saint Joe's fifth NCAA basketball tourney appearance.

More than anything else, intense team courage paved the Pumas' avenue to the NCAA tourney. Injuries, ineligibilities and untimely bad breaks that cost SJC a couple of ball games might have broken lesser teams, but the Pumas called on a deep reservoir of courage to upset taller, quicker and more muscular foes in a season-ending rush that secured the NCAA bid.

Saint Joe won seven of its last nine games and ten of its last 13 with a combination of stiff defense, clutch shooting and rugged rebounding. And possibly most important of all was a careful shuffling of manpower.

This particular tourney bid had to be a particularly pleasing item for head coach George Waggoner and assistant coach George Post, for this march to the tourney represents the most skillful showing of expertise from the bench since Jim Holstein's 1969-70 club roared home with a Great Lakes Regional title.

Much like that 1969-70 team, this edition of the Pumas owned no all-American selections. And again like the 1969-70 team, this outfit did not dazzle you with monstrous front-line size, blinding backcourt quickness or an overpowering display of muscle. Rather, this was a team built on unity, teamwork, shrewd leadership and a proven ability to do what's necessary to get the job done.

In issuing credit for the 19-8 season of 1977-78, Waggoner says, "It starts with your seniors, and we had some good ones. Captain Tommy Gallant was our leader on and off the court, and he's a living testimonial to what can be accomplished by effort and determination. Forward Kevin Merkell gave us some very good games and was a good team player, and of course we most gratifying season, and since we played many underclassmen, we have to feel we've laid a solid groundwork for next year."

Pumas Support Evansville Fund With Contribution Of $341

Saint Joseph's and Montana State raised $341.65 last December in basketball game proceeds to be sent to the University of Evansville Memorial Fund to help that school in recovery from the Dec. 13 plane crash that killed its basketball team, coach and support personnel.

"I'd like to personally thank every fan who braved the cold winds and drifting snow to come to the fieldhouse and show their concern and support for the University of Evansville," said Saint Joe athletic director Richard Scharf. "It was a terrific gesture on their part, when it might have been more comfortable to simply stay at home."

Before the opening tipoff, Scharf read the following message sent to him by Jim Byers, athletic director at Evansville:

"The University of Evansville and the families associated with the tragedy on December 13th wish to express our heart-warming thanks to our dear friends at Saint Joseph's College for this gracious tribute. This contribution, both spiritually and financially, means a great deal to all of us."

Women Cagers Win

Women's varsity basketball began at Collegeville in 1975-76, and after that season of mixed joys and sorrows, Dave Smith joined the athletic staff for the 1976-77 season as the team's coach.

And success was immediate: the 1976-77 team roared to a 14-2 record and readily impressed the entire campus with its spirit, drive and winning attitude. However, last winter's team lost its top rebounder and top scorer, and the immediate question was: Can they be a winner again?

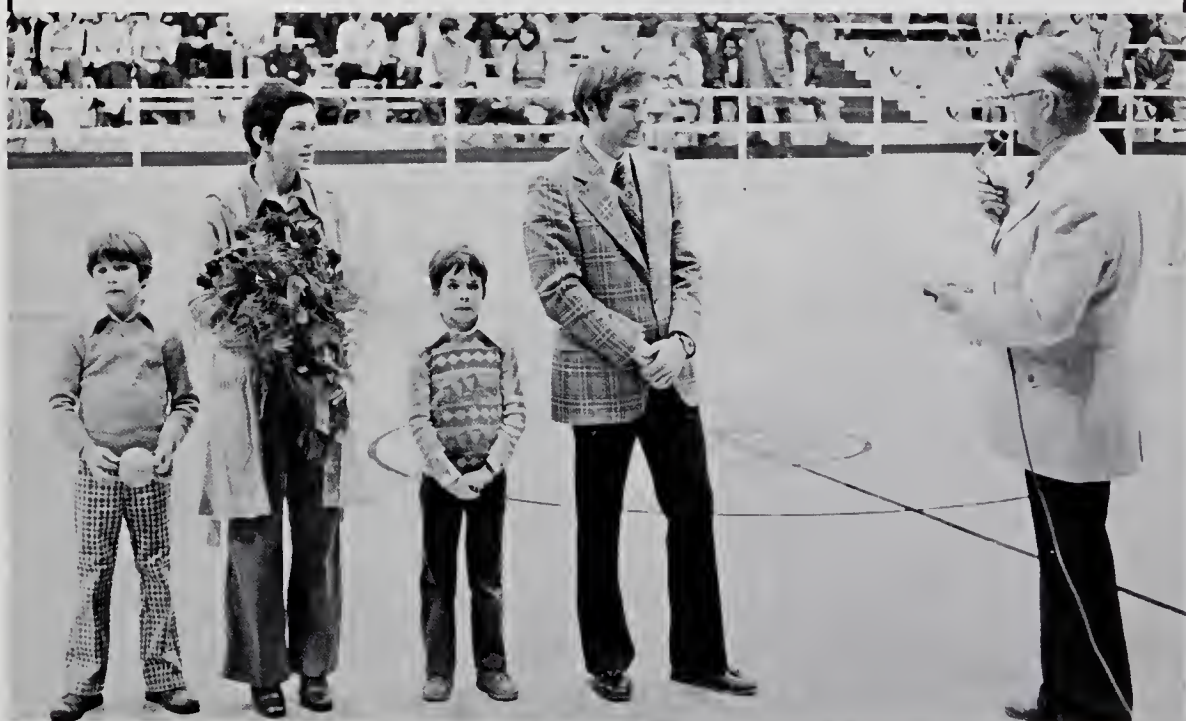

The Pumas rolled to a 15-3 record before losing to Franklin in the state finals.

"Due to illness, we played several games without regulars Sue Rebac, Regina Fisher and Betsy Clark early in the season, when we lost our three games," notes Smith. "Fisher has been averaging 15 rebounds per game, Rebac is scoring about 12 points a game and Clark came off the bench to score 18 points in our regional overtime win over IUPUI-Fort Wayne. You can't play without people like that and not feel it."

He adds that the Pumas played very effective man-to-man defense, while the rebounding showed steady improvement.

"Another item is that we were a very young team at the start of the season and we had to learn to play together," Smith reports. "When you're so young, you have to come along slowly, building poise and confidence with experience, and there's little doubt now that we've had a very good year."

Crowley Joins Sports Hall Of Fame

Tom Crowley, along with his family, is shown receiving the "Hall of Fame" memento from Richard Scharf, SJC athletic director.
